Assessment of modern slavery risks

We recognise that modern slavery is a global problem affecting every country of the world which requires a co-ordinated response from governments and companies alike. In our approach to modern slavery, we have taken guidance from: the Commonwealth Modern Slavery Act 2018 – Guidance for Reporting Entities developed by the Department for Home Affairs; the UN Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights which sets the standard for countries and companies to prevent, address and remedy human rights abuses committed in business operations; and target 8.7 under the UN Sustainable Development Goals which sets a global goal to take action to eradicate forced labour and end modern slavery.

We understand that modern slavery is an umbrella term that includes a range of serious exploitative practices and labour rights abuses, such as human trafficking, debt bondage, forced labour and the worst forms of child labour. While poor labour practices such as substandard working conditions or underpayment of workers do not meet the definition of modern slavery, we understand these forms of exploitation are high risk factors that may lead to modern slavery over time. Modern slavery can also occur in any industry, at any point in the supply chain, but is often hidden deep down the supply chain and so can be difficult to detect. High risk industries identified by the Human Rights Working Group of the Responsible Investment Association of Australasia include agriculture and fishing, apparel, construction and building materials, electronics and electronics recycling and mining. We recognise that red flags that might identify modern slavery include complex and long supply chains with many intermediaries, supply chains with predominately migrant workers and oligopolistic industries with a small number of companies putting pricing pressures on their suppliers.

Approach to risk assessment

Our dedicated Working Group was established in FY19/20, comprised of partners and representatives from our legal, risk and business operations, including procurement and information technology teams (Working Group). During FY21/22, the Working Group examined the learnings from the previous year and made improvements to further develop the firm's risk assessment approach (as discussed further below in the 'Assessing the effectiveness of our actions' section), our processes and ongoing monitoring, and reporting with respect to modern slavery.

As part of these improvements, we undertook further risk assessment of a previously identified risk area, being our ICT suppliers, and performed a review of our premises cleaning providers, which is another identified risk area, as detailed further below. On the basis of the outcomes of our risk assessments during the reporting period, we consider that the risk of modern slavery within the firm's operations and supply chain is low.

ICT suppliers

We have previously identified that the ICT sector poses some level of risk of forced labour in certain regions and there is generally a lack of public information on ICT supply chain management, including with respect to the materials and components in ICT hardware. Therefore, there continues to be an inherent risk that our procurement of ICT hardware is linked to modern slavery practices, most prevalent in the raw material extraction, manufacturing and disposal stages.

To date, approximately 75 of our material ICT suppliers, including software providers, have completed our online Modern Slavery Risk Assessment Questionnaire (Questionnaire) including 30 during FY21/22. A number of our ICT suppliers are headquartered in or have engaged subcontractors (for example a global support model that included post-sale services) located in countries with a higher prevalence of modern slavery according to the Walk Free Foundation's Global Slavery Index, such as India and the Philippines. However the application of our risk assessment methodology to the Questionnaire responses from our ICT suppliers did not produce any high risk ratings.

With respect to ICT suppliers, our assessment is that our overall risk of causing or contributing to modern slavery through our operations and procurement of goods and services is low. However we recognise that the risk of being directly linked to modern slavery is higher because of the presence of a small number of our ICT suppliers in geographies associated with a higher prevalence of modern slavery.

Case Study: ICT Supplier

In FY20/21 we had identified that a global IT software supplier which provided inadequate and inconsistent responses to our Questionnaire was headquartered in India employing thousands of staff.

In FY21/22, the IT team arranged meetings with the supplier to communicate our concerns and obtained updated information about the supplier's operations and its processes. We carried out a further risk assessment based on the additional information provided by the supplier, including the supplier's commitment to preparing a modern slavery report. Both parties benefited from the open discussions and the IT team was committed to following the supplier's progress going forward. Given that the risk rating remained at medium, the decision was made to renew the licence on an annual basis with a view to assessing the risk rating each year.

Assessment of modern slavery risks

Other suppliers of services / third party arrangements

During FY21/22 we performed a risk based analysis of our non-ICT suppliers against a range of modern slavery risk indicators. We continued to use our online Questionnaire to engage with non-ICT suppliers, including suppliers which take part in our competitive tender process. Competitive tenders included procurement of insurance related services, professional services and ICT hardware/software.

In situations where a supplier declined to complete our online Questionnaire, we undertook our own desktop review based on the information provided by the supplier (including their own modern slavery statement and standard policies available from their website) and our own information sources. Our data capture and reporting processes have been enhanced to capture these situations for ongoing monitoring purposes.

Some smaller suppliers who are not required to comply with the Modern Slavery Act did not feel they needed to complete the Questionnaire. Some smaller suppliers were answering modern slavery questions for the first time. In those situations, the procurement team offered to support them if they had questions while completing the Questionnaire. To help small suppliers who lack resources to understand modern slavery risks, the procurement team is looking to develop a tool such as an easy to understand information sheet (as noted in the 'future actions' section below).

Another potential modern slavery risk we have identified through our risk assessment process is in sectors where a large portion of people are paid the minimum wage or are migrant workers. These sectors include accommodation services, office premises cleaning services and hospitality and catering services.

We continued to focus on understanding any risks that may be present in cleaning services we obtain directly or arranged through facilities services provided by our office landlords. We recognise cleaning services may be at higher risk with the potential for low skilled and migrant workforce presenting opportunities for exploitation and layers of subcontracting which obscure labour conditions. These types of services are often indirectly procured by the firm through outsourcing and third party contracting arrangements.

Following additional due diligence work on our supply chain, we identified no additional factors which indicate that the risk profile for our operations or our suppliers has changed from our previous reporting period, supporting our assessment that our overall risk of causing, contributing or being directly linked to modern slavery through our operations and procurement of goods and services is low.

Assessment of modern slavery risks

Case Study: Cleaning Services Report

In FY21/22 we undertook an investigation into contracted cleaning services in all our Australian office premises to better understand the risks that may be present and to better understand initiatives that were being undertaken in the commercial property sector regarding cleaning services and modern slavery risks. In particular, we examined the work of the Cleaning Accountability Framework (CAF) (an independent, not-for-profit multi-stakeholder initiative that seeks to improve labour standards in the cleaning industry in Australia), the Property Council of Australia and the use of expert external consultants by some landlords and property owners.

The investigation included an examination of our 'Base Building Cleaning Services', where cleaning services were provided to us by subcontractor arrangements arranged by the landlord (ie tier 2 supplier) or sub-contracted by the landlord's asset manager (ie tier 3 supplier). The purpose of the investigation was to better understand the risks associated with the tier 2 and tier 3 suppliers. We were able to contact the tier 2 and tier 3 suppliers via our landlords who were supportive of our examination.

The examination included two parts:

- assessment of the cleaning service provider (tier 3). We did this by using our standard assessment methodology on the tier 3 supplier itself including having the cleaning service provider complete our Questionnaire. The purpose was to look directly through the supply chain and engage directly with the actual supplier of the service; and

- an interview with each office landlord to understand their current position and understanding of modern slavery risk in the cleaning services sector and ascertain their future direction regarding the contracting of cleaning services, in particular to establish whether they were moving towards detailed compliance frameworks that can deliver effective assurances on modern slavery risk.

Through this process we discovered that:

- all our subcontracted cleaning service providers were large sophisticated entities who either were themselves subject to modern slavery reporting obligations and/or had involvement with the CAF initiative. Using our Modern Slavery Risk Assessment Matrix, publicly available information and the Questionnaire, each provider was eventually risk rated in the low category; and
- the level of maturity and understanding of the risks of modern slavery in contracted cleaning services varied across landlords, for example:
 - for three of our offices, the landlord had a very mature approach to the modern slavery risks associated with cleaning services with detailed compliance framework and independent assurance (including either CAF certification or independent auditing of providers). This provided us with a high level of confidence; and

- for the other offices, the position is either a rather less mature approach on the modern slavery risks associated with cleaning services or in a state of flux (for example, because it is a new building or a new landlord) and this provided us with a lower level of confidence. In these offices it is the sophistication of the supplier itself who provided us with assurance rather than the landlord.

As a result of this investigation in FY22/23 we will be:

- updating our office procurement strategy to include minimum standards around cleaning contracts in particular compliance frameworks that can deliver effective assurances on modern slavery risks; and
- providing training to key corporate services staff in each office to understand the risks and visible indicators around modern slavery for cleaning contractors.

In addition, in FY23/24 we plan to repeat our engagement with the landlords on this issue.

Assessment of modern slavery risks

MinterEllison policies

Our assessment of the risk of modern slavery in our operations and supply chains has been carried out against the background of our existing policies and procedures aimed at ensuring a safe and just working environment for our staff and our suppliers. Summary of actions to assess and address modern slavery risks

During FY21/22, we carried out all of the future actions proposed in our FY20/21 Statement as detailed above in the 'Assessment of modern slavery risks' section and summarised in the table below:

Proposed action	FY21/22 actions
To take a risk based approach in our engagement with suppliers by applying the Questionnaire on selected categories of suppliers	A risk based approach was defined and implemented, whereby we conducted a modern slavery assessment depending on the procurement category and location of the goods or services being provided. These assessments took into account the supplier and their subcontractors (ie our indirect supply chain). We also conducted a modern slavery risk assessment as part of our tender process for insurance, professional services and ICT categories. Where possible, we have included modern slavery and compliance with our Procurement Compliance Standards in our supplier agreements.
To identify and implement improvements in our procurement arrangements to address modern slavery risks	As part of the firm's procurement process improvements, we have made business operations managers (who manage the majority of supplier relationships) aware of the identified modern slavery risks and the firm's processes and steps being taken to mitigate these risks prior to onboarding suppliers. During FY21/22 presentation sessions were given to managers in the Corporate Services, Talent, and Digital teams. We also established a procurement page on the firm's intranet, including a link to further information and resources relating to modern slavery.
To increase utilisation of modern slavery risk mitigation tools developed by the Working Group	We have continued to make improvements to our modern slavery risk mitigation tools and find ways to integrate them into the firm's procurement framework. The system improvements and integration resulted in increased awareness within the business and increased volume of assessments completed. The procurement team are more confident and efficient in undertaking risk assessments and engaging with suppliers on areas of concern.
To develop and implement a remediation plan to address any findings of modern slavery practices in our supply chain	We have developed a remediation plan for use by the procurement and risk teams to ensure modern slavery findings or concerns are addressed promptly. The remediation plan sets out internal escalation points and consultation processes to ensure appropriate remediation actions are taken.

Assessing the effectiveness of our actions

Our actions to assess and address modern slavery risks were overseen by the Working Group which met quarterly to:

- review our modern slavery risk assessment methodology;
- monitor progress against the program of actions planned for the reporting period;
- approve and monitor implementation of new and updated internal resources concerning modern slavery; and
- share insights and new developments in modern slavery reporting under the Modern Slavery Act.

Quarterly updates were provided to the MinterEllison Partnership Board on the progress of MinterEllison's processes and actions for identifying and addressing modern slavery risks.

The actions the Working Group undertook during FY21/22 contributed to the following improvements in our engagement with our suppliers and the ways in which we assess and address modern slavery risks:

- continued to refine our risk based approach for assessing and addressing modern slavery risk, including (where applicable) to assess the subcontractors involved in the provision of services to the firm;
- focused on in-depth engagement with the suppliers in the tender process, prior to onboarding or on contract renewal;

- identified opportunities to better understand sector specific risks and tier 2 and tier 3 suppliers, for example through the examination of cleaning service providers;
- further developed understanding of our suppliers, their operations and supply chain, by close engagement to resolve concerns about the supplier's operations or supply chain from their responses in the Questionnaires;
- increased formalisation and centralisation of the firm's procurement process, record keeping and management of suppliers; and
- defined internal escalation processes to ensure identified risks and concerns are brought to the attention of senior personnel and the product/purchase sponsor, and a response plan is followed.

Consultation

The Statement was prepared by the Working Group comprised of representatives of partners who are leading our firm's modern slavery risk management practice, procurement teams and General Counsel and Risk teams. The Working Group prepared and implemented a project plan which was endorsed by the firm's Executive Leadership Team to prepare this Statement. Members of the Working Group engaged with business units across the firm, including Finance and client practice groups, to understand the firm's supply chain. The Working Group worked collaboratively to develop and implement the modern slavery project plan and to prepare this Statement.

MinterEllison consulted with its owned and controlled entities in the development of this Statement. The Working Group referred the Statement to MinterEllison Consulting and IT Newcom Pty Limited for feedback, which led to an open discussion on the reporting requirements and the future actions of continuous improvement.

The Statement was reviewed by the Executive Leadership Team, prior to formal approval by the MinterEllison Partnership Board and Minter Ellison Services Pty Ltd.

Other information – future actions

With our focus on continuous improvement and building on the knowledge gained from our due diligence and risk assessment, our plan is to take the following actions during our subsequent reporting periods to reduce the risk of modern slavery in our supply chains:

- monitor the federal government's review of the Modern Slavery Act and review the firm's policy and processes on modern slavery taking into account the outcome of the review;
- review premises procurement practices and continue engagement with landlords and service providers in relation to modern slavery risks;
- conduct additional firm-wide training to increase awareness of modern slavery risks;
- develop tools to assist smaller suppliers who lack resources to understand modern slavery risks, including by providing digestible information sheets;
- improve our supplier data capture processes for our procurement activities within the firm in order to further improve our operations and supply chain risk assessment processes, including consideration of how we can improve our Questionnaire;
- continue to require our suppliers to adhere to our Responsible Procurement Standards;
- continue our risk assessment of suppliers to better identify risk and strengthening our supplier engagement around modern slavery
- continue to identify ways to raise awareness of our grievance mechanisms with potentially affected stakeholders; and
- continue to engage and collaborate with relevant external stakeholders to share good practice.
